Introduction

The following is an unofficial catalog of over 650 works attributed to the Báb, 11,800 works attributed to Bahá'u'lláh, and 12,000 works attributed to 'Abdu'l-Bahá which are accessible to the public, either in published form, in manuscripts held in national or institutional archives, or in digital images, texts and translations found on the Internet. The holdings of the Bahá'í World Centre Archives in Haifa, Israel, which are not open to the public, are not included.

The primary goals of the catalog are to compile all publicly available sources of the works of the three Central Figures of the Bahá'í Faith both in the original languages and in English translation, and where possible to facilitate online access to these sources via hyperlinks to digitized page images or typed texts. As the goal is maximal inclusion, works of unknown authentication status, oral statements and provisional translations are all included, and so users should approach this content with a source-critical eye. The Bahá'í Reference Library website at www.bahai.org/library is the official online repository of fully authenticated Bahá'í scriptures and their translations, and entries in that repository are given pride of place in this catalog.

As the surviving works of the Báb are known to comprise around 2,000 items, those of Bahá'u'lláh nearly 20,000 items, and those of 'Abdu'l-Bahá over 30,000 items, the present catalog represents roughly 30%, 60%, and 40%, respectively, of the known item count for each author. By cumulative word count coverage, it represents somewhat more than half of the known total (9 million out of an estimated 16 million words).<sup>1</sup>

Catalog entries follow a standard format designed for compact presentation. Each entry contains the following elements:

ID: Each work is assigned a unique ID number, comprising a two-digit author code (BB for the Báb, BH for Bahá'u'lláh, and AB for 'Abdu'l-Bahá) and a five-digit number in generally descending order of approximate word count.

In keeping with the goal of maximum inclusivity, oral statements are included in this catalog, although they were excluded in the above statistics (sometimes referred to as “pilgrims’ notes”; they comprise around 15% of the catalog by item count). They receive entries in separate sequences prefixed with BBU, BHU, and ABU (U for “utterances”), respectively. This category includes a range of material of varying proximity to the source, from talks approved for publication by 'Abdu'l-Bahá for which published Persian transcriptions also exist, to personal recollections written down in another language years later. All are non-authoritative owing to the lack of an original text authenticated by its author. As a letter written on behalf of Shoghi Effendi states: “According to the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh no authority can be attached to a mere hearsay, no matter through whom it may come. The Tablets that bear the seal or signature of Bahá'u'lláh and the Master ['Abdu'l-Bahá] are the only parts of the literature that have any authority and that constitute the basis of our belief. All other forms of literature may bear points of interest but they cannot be considered as authentic.” (18 Nov. 1931, LG#1437)

Any future editions of this catalog will preserve the existing ID assignments so that they can be used as stable references. Thus, newly added works will be assigned numbers at the end of their respective series regardless of word count. In addition, some items are extracts or fragments which have not yet been located within a complete text, or translations not yet matched with the original. Further research may lead to some items being merged, creating gaps in the sequence.

Ordering items by length will tend to increase the prominence of longer items that are more peripheral while reducing that of items that are shorter but more central. To partially compensate, a few of the most central works of the three authors were placed at the heads of their respective sequences.

Title or description: Titles in Shoghi Effendi's lists of best-known works appearing in the original The Bahá'í World series are used when they exist, and are printed in bold font to highlight their relative importance. Other works may be given a commonly used title, brief description or informal working title; otherwise this field is left blank. Diacritical marks are dropped for simplicity.

Word count: Word counts should be regarded as estimates and are rounded off to the nearest ten. Addressee, salutations and closing may be included in the word counts of some items but not in others. Where only excerpts of a work are available, the word count roughly represents the length of the excerpt. Some discrepancies may arise when only a translation is available because word counts for the same passage are usually higher in English than in Persian and Arabic. In a few cases the existence of a work is known but its word count is not.

Language: Over 90% of the works of the Báb, well over half of the works of Bahá'u'lláh, and one third of the works of 'Abdu'-Bahá, are in Arabic (Ara); the remainder are in Persian (Per) or a mixture of the two (mixed). The language may be listed as mixed even if the ratio of one or the other is small. A small fraction of 'Abdu'-Bahá's correspondence is in Ottoman Turkish (Trk), and there are a few dozen cablegrams in English (Eng) for which it is assumed that there is no Persian original. For several dozen utterances of Abdu'l-Bahá the only available text is a German translation.

First line (where available): First lines in Arabic and Persian may omit introductory phrases and may contain typing errors and discrepancies against the available text. Tashdid, maddah, and hamzah may be omitted. In all cases the source text should be assumed to be more reliable than the typed version in the catalog. In some cases the existence of a work is known, possibly in translation, but its original-language incipit is not.

Manuscript sources (Mss): Manuscript references are given in a condensed format for efficiency, as follows: Source code (a few letters long; see the key to source codes), volume (as needed), a period or colon separator, page number (followed by "r" for recto and "v" for verso, as needed), another period separator, and finally the line number (or order on the page when there are multiple items, "a", "b", "c", etc.—if there are multiple quotations on a page then those from well-known works may be ignored), as needed. So "PR02.069v01" is Princeton manuscript Pr02, page 69 verso, line 1. There are some variations in this format; the meaning should be decipherable in context (and by consulting the source index to see how other items within the same source are indexed). Sometimes the ending page is also given. In a few cases the reference is by order of item in the volume (#) rather than by page number. Entries suffixed with "x" are extracts or incomplete. The ordering of sources within this section has no significance.

Hyperlinks to content hosted on various web sites are included where available. Some effort has been made to link to the exact page, but links may land many pages from the target (and the links may work better on a PC than on a cellphone). As with all Internet content, links may become broken; in such cases the Wayback Machine at archive.org may contain an archived copy.

Original language publications (Pubs): Sources listed in this section include print publications and Internet content, and are also given in condensed format, with links provided where available. Precedence in listing order is accorded to the official repository at www.bahai.org/library (BRL), otherwise order of appearance is not important. While well over 200 published original-language titles are referenced in the catalog, the degree of incompleteness is high. Priority has been assigned to indexing publications containing works not found elsewhere. This may include controversial or polemical sources when they are the only available source. Extracts from the most well-known works, such as the Kitáb-i-Aqdas, are usually not indexed.

Incoming question or context (Question): Included for a minority of works, mostly reported utterances of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. They have also been compiled in an index of questions following the catalogs.

English translations (Trans): Includes both print publications and content found on the Internet. Similarly listed in condensed format, with hyperlinks provided where available. Translations authorized at the Bahá’í World Centre are listed before others. Full translations are usually listed before extracts (the latter suffixed as always with an “x”). Many provisional translations are works in progress or otherwise tentative, and inclusion in this catalog does not constitute an endorsement of their accuracy. Where available the first line in English is given, preceded by ellipses if an extract, and in light grey font if provisional. Diacritical marks are often dropped or inconsistently applied. The same translation may be cataloged in more than one source. Over 140 English-language sources are included.

Musical interpretations (Musical interps.): Musical compositions are one marker of the influence and centrality of a work within the community. Criteria for inclusion here are minimal: Works must be available on the Internet and should be studio recorded. An index of musical interpretations is provided, grouped by catalog ID in descending order of song frequency. There are over 1,600 works in this initial listing, dominated by English, Persian and Arabic songs and chants, with a smaller number of other languages represented.

Miscellaneous notes and index entries (Notes): Also listed in condensed format, with links provided where available. A few previous handlists and catalogs, often containing useful information, are included here, as well as a small number of miscellaneous notes, and references to discussions in the secondary literature; only a fraction of the possible references have been included.

Abstract: This is a content summary, available experimentally for selected items. Most abstracts are computer generated, which case they indicate the source (for this version, GPT-4). All such abstracts have been read and some have been edited, but they should be assumed not to have been corrected against the source text. Abstracts are intended to provide a glimpse into the content, possibly highlight a few points of interest, and provide another way of accessing content by searching for keywords. Particularly in this first iteration, they should be read with caution and assumed to be inaccurate and incomplete: some are verbose or vague, others miss the gist of the work, and references to people, places and events are often missed or inaccurate. It is anticipated that they will be improved in future versions of the catalog. Abstracts of best-known works of Baha’u’llah are taken from chapter 5 of The World of the Bahá’í Faith (Routledge, 2022).

A bibliography with key to the source codes follows the catalog entries, with hyperlinks to scanned or typed works where they could be found.

The Appendix represents one attempt to organize some of the subject matter of the works indexed in the catalogs. It presents a subject classification scheme comprising five main sections, corresponding roughly to questions of being, knowledge, conduct, governance, and the historical contingencies of past, present and future. A side column suggests areas of overlap with traditional academic disciplines. The overall structure generally follows Immanuel Kant's three questions of reason:<sup>2</sup> "What can we know?" (sections I and II), "What ought we to do?" (sections III and IV); "What may we hope?" (section V).

Approximately 800 subheadings follow the main subject headings. These conceptual building blocks, which are interconnected and overlapping, are in most cases hyperlinked to thematic compilations of quotations from the Bahá'í Writings and beyond hosted at <http://loom.loomofreality.org>, which itself is organized in a different, less flattened hierarchy of subjects and with multiple cross-references. Both organizational schemes are personal projects and represent only two possible thematic reconstructions of the source material.

A second volume contains a series of finding aids, all keyed to the ID numbers and source codes:

- An index of source references. While lengthy, this is the backbone of the catalogs, and essentially presents a scriptural table of contents for each quoted source.
- An index of first lines (with invocations removed). This is offered especially as an aid to researchers in identifying newly discovered manuscripts.
- An index of questions (applying mainly to some of the reported utterances of 'Abdu'l-Bahá).
- An index of musical compositions, in descending order of frequency.

A project of this scope will inevitably contain many errors and omissions. Errata, broken or misdirected links, quotations to fill out underrepresented subject categories, links to scanned versions of additional source texts, additional and corrections to abstracts, and other feedback can be sent to loom.of.reality@gmail.com.

Occasional updates are planned. The latest version of this catalog can be found at <http://blog.loomofreality.org/>.

Addendum to version 3.0:

Apart from the newly added abstract category, this update to the Inventory also contains more than 20 new sources containing over 2,500 texts and translations, over 400 of which form new catalog entries. There have also been many corrections.

Many individuals have generously contributed their time to improving this new catalog. Special thanks are due to Adib Masumian for innumerable contributions and corrections and Violetta Zein for the cover art. Thanks also to Markus Liebscher and Nima Rafiei for suggesting further additions.

Abstract: The 'mother book' of the Bahá'í Dispensation, announcing to the kings of the earth the promulgation of the 'Most Great Law'; formally ordaining the institution of the House of Justice; prescribing the obligatory prayers; designating the time and period of fasting; formulating laws surrounding marriage and inheritance; ordaining the institution of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár (houses of worship); establishing the Nineteen Day Feasts; abolishing the institution of priesthood; and specifying punishments for murder, arson, adultery, and theft. Apart from these laws, He reminds his followers of the twin duties of recognition and obedience; exhorts them to fellowship with the adherents of all religions; warns them to guard against fanaticism, sedition, pride, dispute, and contention; enjoins on them cleanliness, truthfulness, chastity, hospitality, fidelity, courtesy, forbearance, justice, and fairness; and counsels them to be 'even as the fingers of one hand and the limbs of one body'.

Abstract: Bahá'u'lláh's preeminent doctrinal work as well as His second longest, answering four questions from an uncle of the Báb regarding prophetic expectation and fulfilment, affirming the essential unity of the prophets of God while simultaneously acknowledging the distinctiveness of their persons and missions, expounding the concept of progressive revelations from God that are renewed about every thousand years, summarizing the spiritual prerequisites of the seekers on the spiritual path, clarifying the central role in that path of the independent investigation of reality, condemning the clergy for their role in the rejection of the prophets from age to age, and emphasizing, through a commentary on certain verses of the gospels, the need for a symbolic as opposed to a literal understanding of sacred scriptures.

E. Walker, Chicago Baha'i Community, C. Oja. Notes: ROB4.214 et al, BKO.382, MMAH.161, GSH.161, LL#024. Abstract: Proclaims eleven 'leaves of paradise': the fear of God, the importance of religion, the golden rule, that rulers should possess good character and act in justice (in contrast to Muḥammad Sháh, whose deeds in particular are denounced), reward and punishment as the basis of order in the world, justice, the unity of mankind, the education of children, moderation, renouncing asceticism and monasticism, and forbidding religious strife and dissension.

Notes: LL#294, LL#380. Abstract: Responds to objections to His claims raised by some Bábis, implores them not to be shut out from the truth by the veil of names, acknowledges the outward differences between sacred scriptures while asserting that this derives from the varying capacity of humanity, extols at length the revelation and the crucifixion of Jesus as having infused 'a fresh capacity into all created things', compares the Báb to John the Baptist and announces Himself to be the return of Christ, and declares that the purpose of His revelation, like Christ's, is to bestow eternal life.

Abstract: A mystic tablet that emphasizes the importance of seeking guidance from God and turning away from the tumultuous world of material distractions. Advises avoidance of those who are envious and spiritually false, and exhorts the followers of the Faith to practice spiritual discretion, wisdom, and constancy. Describes the unfolding of Divine revelation during the tumultuous times in which the faithful must strive to serve and protect the truth, while also expressing the hope that the Divine light would triumph over the darkness of ignorance and unbelief. Reflects on the significance of heeding the words of the Manifestation of God and the loftiness of attaining the Divine presence, asserting the supremacy and everlasting glory of the enlightened in the spiritual realm. Calls upon the recipients of the Tablet to be ever mindful of their duties to God, to strengthen the bonds of unity among the faithful, and to bring about a transformation in the lives of people. Abstract: A mystic tablet by Bahá'u'lláh praises God for manifesting the Holy Point, which is described as one where no other can be seen but God. Descriptions include the embellishment of the Tablets, the majesty of the names and attributes, and the point under the letter B. Details the appearance of the Greatest Name, which causes the tremor of nations and the shaking of the heavens and the earth, along with a reference to the divine conversation with Moses at Sinai. Counsels the importance of spiritual wisdom, adherence to God's commandments, and proper conduct among people. Warns against attachment to worldly illusions and emphasizes faith in God alone. Encourages spiritual education and teaching the divine message with kindness and gentleness, as well as adherence to God's commands as revealed in the Holy Tablets. Provides advice to believers, such as remaining steadfast in faith, serving God, and acting in accordance with divine teachings. Touches on the significance of the revealed Tablets and their connection to prophetic statements about the time of fulfillment. Calls for the purification of hearts from doubt and unity among the followers of the Faith, who should glorify God and spread His message through good deeds, virtuous conduct, and sincerity. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Addresses various individuals and groups of believers with guidance, exhortations, and encouragement. Calls on them to recognize and support the Day of God and to remain firm in their faith despite opposition and challenges. Encourages them to perform good deeds, follow divine guidance, and abstain from arguing or disputing with others. Stresses the importance of detachment, trust in God, and spiritual qualities, and reminds believers of the exalted station they have attained through their recognition of the truth. Emphasizes the importance of wisdom, good deeds, and ethical behavior in the service of God's Cause. Offers consolation and joy to the believers, assuring them of divine assistance and a blessed outcome if they remain steadfast in their faith and devotion, and warns them against being influenced by those who reject His message or spread falsehoods. Offers a glimpse into the challenging circumstances faced by the early Baha'i believers in Persia, as well as the unwavering love, support, and encouragement provided by Bahá'u'lláh during those difficult times. Abstract: Describes the significance and emotions surrounding the martyrdom of the Báb and others who willingly sacrificed their lives for the Cause of God. Notes that people's hearts will be moved by their sacrifice, and teaches the transcendent importance of attaining eternal life through dedication to the divine path, rather than simply living and dying without significance. Recognizes the service and devotion of various individuals, including Muhammad-Báqir and Muhammad-Hasan, and extends blessings and prayers for spiritual growth and protection. Advises believers to remain focused on serving the Cause, rather than being distracted by misconceptions and doubts, and encourages them to seek the assistance, guidance, and favor of God in all circumstances. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Addresses a number of theological questions by implying that the answers lie in the realm of action, in the process elucidating several central Bahá'í teachings: that the Manifestations should be regarded as 'divine physicians' prescribing the remedy from age to age in accordance with the disease, that the unity of mankind is the remedy for the ills of today, that one should be 'anxiously concerned with the needs of the age' in which one lives and centre one's deliberations 'on its exigencies and requirements', and that words should be matched with deeds and that both should be motivated by purity of intention.

Encourages the believer to contemplate their own experiences with Bahá'u'lláh, drawing upon examples such as the unwavering mountains and the patient seas. Urges the believer to follow the guidance of God and to not let illusions veiled by passion and desire cloud their judgment. Warns against putting faith solely in the writings of earlier religious traditions, as this will not provide salvation in this day. Reminds the reader that heavenly hosts, including the celestial hours, weep at the persecution and suffering of the Manifestation. Affirms the power of God and His ability to control all things, imploring the believer to both trust in God and to not be swayed by those who discount the majesty of the Manifestation. Reassurance is given that the spiritual truths will only be found by those who are pure of heart and have firm belief. Lastly, the believer is encouraged to draw close to the divine presence and detach themselves from falsehoods and doubts. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Announces the coming of the divine Spring and calls to celebrate the "Day of God". Describes the spiritual intoxication experienced in this Day, where divine mercy encompasses all things, and heavenly blessings flow abundantly. Invites all to drink the Kawthar of nearness and reunion and calls on them to cast away the illusions of the world and turn to God. Addresses the difficulties faced by the believers, assuring them that God's grace surrounds them and inviting them to rejoice in the remembrance of the divine Days. Emphasizes the importance of recognizing and acknowledging the greatness of God and the wonders of His divine wisdom. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Speaks of the radiance of divine beauty and the importance of discernment during tests and afflictions. Emphasizes the responsibility for devotees to walk on the path of God and strengthen their faith, thus distinguishing themselves from those who have failed. Encourages the friends of God to focus on the remembrance of Him and to be steadfast in their spiritual journey, escaping the influences of the enchanting world. Mentions spiritual insights and knowledge as the fruits that human souls should attain in this divine period. Requests divine protection for the loved ones from the mischief of unbelievers and the whispers of Satan and prays that they may eternally drink from the cup of God's love. (GPT-4)

Pubs: BRL_DA#505, ISH.259, ADH1.058x. Trans: None. Abstract: Describes the triumph of the believer who is drawn to the station where worldly calamities and the rejection of others do not sadden him. Commends another for standing firm in faith and devotion despite the bitter sorrows and enmity of disbelievers. Recalls the sacrifices of ancient prophets, such as Mohammad and Ibrahim, and their steadfastness in the face of persecution. Celebrates the happiness of those who drink from the cup of God's bounty, flee from everything but Him, follow His commandments, and remember His verses.
Conveys God's mercy and brightness upon all those who do not let the injustice of wrongdoers hinder their journey toward God. Asks for God's guidance and support to draw closer to Him and to remember His teachings.

Abstract: Proclaims the Day of God and the blessedness of souls that have turned to God and hearkened to His call. Describes these souls as inhabitants of the highest realm and partakers of the purest spiritual wine. Acknowledges the rarity of sincere seekers in this age and the oppression faced by the divine manifestations. Compares the attempts of people to extinguish the light of God to a drop of saltwater confronting the limitless ocean. Criticizes those who seek worldly power and dominion, asserting that the true purpose is to establish divine justice. Foreshadows the eventual triumph of truth, the lifting of veils, and the recognition of the divine attributes in most of God's servants. Prays for God's assistance, love, and guidance for His servants, and for their awakening to the transformative light, the exalted heaven, and the divine blessings that have been sent down upon the earth. Confirms the validity of a dream, foretelling the manifestation of divine light and power that will outshine the sun, obliterate the traces of those who oppose God, illumine the faces of the sincere, and encompass the earth with the radiance of the countenance of their Lord. Abstract: Mourns the great calamity afflicting the hearts of the chosen ones and causing all things to lament. Describes the radiant light, life-giving spirit, and peace bestowed upon the loved ones through their sacrifices. Asserts that their unity and agreement are witnessed by the hearts of the lovers, as well as their calamities causing the rock to cry out and the pure in heart to shed tears. Depicts their steadfastness and sorrow as adorning the pages of the book of faithfulness and causing the heart of Bahá to grieve. Laments the loss of their outpouring of bounty and the concealment of treasures of faithfulness. Portrays the celestial beings and the Holy Spirit descending to visit and pay homage to the ones who drank the cup of martyrdom. Asserts that their tribulation caused the eye of God to weep, while the Mother of the Book mourned on behalf of their mothers. Calls blessings upon them, their loved ones, and those who visit them. Prays for the adornment of the hearts of humanity with the light of God's love and knowledge, for the people of the earth and the scholars to practice justice and fairness, and for divine assistance, forgiveness, and provision of the supplicant's needs. Abstract: Addresses a beloved of Bahá'u'lláh and conveys the cry of the dwellers of Paradise. Warns about the encircling enemies that surround the Faith. Prays for the protection and honor of the friends of God on the Day when faces will be blackened and eyes will be blinded. Describes Alexandria as once being the crown of Islamic cities, but reduced to ruins after the assault of the foreign powers. Shares that the Bahá'ís who were in Alexandria had to return to their homeland, and their possessions were plundered along with those of others. Mentions a previous Tablet sent to a believer named "M-S" and another Tablet that was written in response to the spiritual beloved's request but delayed in being sent. Prays for divine assistance for the spiritual beloved and "M-S" in matters leading to everlasting success. States that the friends of God and their descendants will be blessed, and expresses hope that they will act with gratitude and in accordance with God's command. Assures that the answers to the questions of the spiritual beloved have been written in a detailed letter that will be sent, and that prayers for all the friends and loved ones have been made, hoping that they will all be victorious. Abstract: Recalls the days of joy and sorrow and describes the grief and turmoil of creation due to the loss of the star of certitude. Laments the plight of the oppressed, including the martyrdom of relatives and associates, and the injustice and negligence they have suffered. Addresses the pen to wail for its own remote station and afflictions, and that of its loved ones. Urges it to remember and honor a great figure who was close to the author, who submitted his spirit for the sake of his Lord, and who was present before God's countenance and subject to divine decrees. Asks God to reward those who visit His beloved ones, purify them from that which is unseemly, forgive them, and grant them the best of the worlds. (GPT-4)

Describes how the fragrances of God's name were about to be extinguished, so Bahá'u'lláh was raised up among humanity to proclaim God's sovereignty. Acknowledges the opposition and hardships faced, including exile and imprisonment in 'Akka, but declares they only serve to increase His joy and eagerness in spreading the Cause. Expresses his willingness to sacrifice himself for the love of God. Asks God to open the eyes of His servants so they may recognize His greatness and not be hindered by the croaking of the raven. Prays that they come together through the divine Covenant revealed through the Prophets and Messengers of old. (GPT-4)

Alludes to the identity of the Stone of the Philosophers, declaring that it is "cast down in every place", that it is single in its essence yet diverse in its manifestations, and that the alchemical process is brought to completion solely by that which resides within it. Explains that the water which is extracted from it, which has been called mercury and which is the key of the operation, nurtures the earth of the stone until the red sulfur, which was concealed within the earth, rises to the surface through the power of the water. Reveals that the red sulfur, which has been called by many names, is the essence of the active agent (jawharu'l-fa'il), the activity of which "astounds the hearts of those who have attained". Enjoins those who have discovered the secret not to make it for themselves. Accuses Mirza Yahya of producing false treatises on the subject based on what he had heard, and misunderstood, from Baha'u'llah's many Tablets on the subject.

Abstract: Expresses pain at separation from God, but finds joy in His favors. Laments in the night over despair, but hopes for God's bounty during the day. Notes the trials and tribulations faced and perceives no end to difficulties. Calls upon God to grant mercy and fulfill promises. Describes willingly sacrificing self for God's sake and endures the plots of enemies with gratitude. Expresses sadness seeing the agitation of God's friends due to veiled understanding. Asks God, by His highest manifestation, to lead all into the path of detachment, bestowing favors, allowing them to drink from the cup of divine beauty, and enabling them to rest on the carpet of His glory. Acknowledges that all dominion belongs to God, who is exalted and self-subsisting. (GPT-4)

Requests that through this serpent, God unites the hearts of His loved ones and brings them together, just as He brought together fire and water. Reflects on the wonders of God's creation and His mysterious works, including creating this serpent to test the strength of His devoted followers. Recognizes that despite the hardships caused by this serpent, the believers look to God for solace and continue to seek His divine grace. Acknowledges that God has promised heavenly rewards for the righteous and the punishment of hellfire for the disobedient. Expresses bewilderment at the workings of God and submits oneself to His will, seeking refuge in Him alone.

Asks people not to cling to created things or take idols as false lords. Compares hearts to mirrors which reflect God's light if turned toward Him, yet lose all traces of the sun if turned away; warns of pride and false claims. Highlights that God creates and elevates some by their names, some by their essence, and some with both in different ranks. Tells the reader not to cling to the past revealed religion, and not to deny the truth when it is revealed. Encourages trust in God and to remind people about the divine message. (GPT-4)

Advises the recipient to draw closer to God and to use their speech to attract the people of all religions. Congratulates the spiritual progress made by the friends in the Land of Z and counsels them to edify others through their spiritual wisdom and guidance. Emphasizes the importance of teaching with the utmost love and compassion, and of drinking from the spiritual fountain of divine knowledge. Warns against individuals who claim to have divine knowledge but are in fact misguided and deceived by their own imaginations. Reminds the believer to remain steadfast and firm in the face of trials and tribulations, knowing that God's divine plan will eventually triumph. Encourages remembering the triumphs of God's chosen ones through the power of His Name and the unity and the sacrifice of their actions. Calls for perseverance in spreading the message of God and recognizing the true value of this sacred day. Urges the believer to rejoice in their devotion to God and to savor the spiritual delights that flow from this Divine Springtime. (GPT-4)

Prays for divine assistance in all circumstances. Mentions deeds that have won God's acceptance, including mentioning Jinab-i-Fadil in the presence of others and sending greetings. Quotes a passage regarding the differences between John the Baptist and Jesus Christ and their followers, highlighting the point that all matters depend on God's command and prohibition. Discusses the importance of adhering to God's commands and expressing gratitude for His blessings, while avoiding dressing or living in excess. Encourages to be content with simple or luxurious food, but recognize the importance of choosing others over oneself in accordance with the divine teachings. Blessings and support are sent to those who assisted in the cause of justice, fairness, patience, and perseverance, and are considered among God's helpers. (GPT-4)

The promises of God, as recorded in the holy Scriptures, have all been fulfilled...* Notes: LL#376, LL#426. Abstract: From the prison of Akka addresses those who are adorned with the new divine attributes and connected to the unity of God. Describes the holy movement that transcends limitations and can be witnessed as swifter than lightning and more pervasive than the winds. Mentions the fulfillment of prophecies, the divine laws flowing forth from Zion, and the illumination of Jerusalem through the revelation of God's light. Encourages reflection on the verses of God, such as the Book of Isaiah's call to enter into the rock and hide in the dust before the awe and majesty of the Lord, which leads to recognizing the greatness of God's revelation. Addresses individuals who came into the presence of Bahá'u'lláh and heard His call and seeks blessings for them in the spiritual kingdom. Prays for all to attain recognition of the divine will, draw nearer to the Source of Revelation, and receive what has been granted to God's chosen ones. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Praises God for the manifestation of a hidden spiritual life-giving spring flowing through divine words, bestowing eternal life and a holy spirit. Describes the origin and source of this spring as the darkness of earth and the curl of the Beloved. Tells of a spiritual maiden, hidden behind a divine veil, who requested permission to reveal the divine radiance upon the worlds. Announces a new creation and the astonishment of the heavenly beings at its creation. Details the divine command to adorn the celestial world with divine beauty and to spread the holy tapestry. Narrates the entrance of the spiritual maiden who bestowed the true spirit upon the inhabitants of the heavens and earth and moved upon the divine tapestry. Describes the dark spots on the tapestry that transformed into beautiful words and hid the essence of divine love. Encourages detachment from the material world in order to attain divine presence, and reveals hidden mysteries that were veiled from human understanding. Urges the reader to connect with this life-giving water and return to the outpourings of God's grace. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Exhorts the hearts of the lovers of God to remain steadfast amidst trials and tribulations. Observes that when calamities befall them, their spiritual lands flourish and produce fruits of divine love and attraction. Notes that nothing can extinguish their attraction or cool their ardour for God. Describes them as giants swimming in the sea of divine remembrance or phoenixes thriving within the flames of God's love. Praises their detachment from the material world and their focus on the divine countenance. Asks God to aid and support His loved ones, so they may stand firm in His Cause and spread His remembrance. Prays for an individual to embody perfect servitude towards the divine, to realize the divine purpose, and for all to taste the sweetness of obedience to God's commands. Seeks God's mercy and grace, acknowledging human weakness and Divine sovereignty. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Exhorts Aba-Tálib, who was unjustly imprisoned, to rejoice in his tribulations as they bring honor in the spiritual realms. Commiserates on their shared experience of imprisonment, but states that they remained joyful through their submission to the will of God. Encourages those seeking God's path to sacrifice all for the true path, and reminds them to focus on the eternal life, rather than the fleeting pleasures of this world. Advises them to submit their wills to the Will of God and to pray for divine assistance in staying steadfast in God's love. Conveys greetings and blessings to the believers, urging them to elevate the Faith and bear witness to the grace, bounty, and mercy of God. Glorifies those who have responded to the Divine call and acknowledged the One True God, and warns of the spiritual perils facing the heedless. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Proclaims the Day of God, wherein the skies will be filled with manifest smoke, and mountains will pass like clouds. Calls attention to the fulfillment of prophecies regarding this Divine Revelation. Advises the seeker to relinquish worldly attachments in order to attain a station beyond the worlds, and to immerse themselves in the remembrance of God. Encourages heartfelt prayers and supplication in recognition of one's spiritual poverty, ignorance, and distance from God. Assures that even if one has been deprived of good deeds since the beginning of time, redemption and forgiveness are still possible, as the ocean of pardon is accessible and the heaven of forgiveness is elevated. Promises that, by reciting these sacred words and following these divine counsels, one will not be deprived of the effulgent spiritual bounties emanating from the heavenly Sun. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Urges Majīd to hear the cry of Baha'u'llah, who experiences great suffering and unjust treatment. Mentions Baha'u'llah's patience and steadfastness, contrasting it with the people's indifference and inability to comprehend. Reminds Majīd of the sacrifices Baha'u'llah made for the exalted Cause of God and the attempts on his life by his detractors. Laments the false accusations aimed at poisoning hearts and divulges attempts at discrediting his character. Encourages Majīd, who attained faith in God and the recognition of the Manifestation of God early on, to remain steadfast and be an example to others. (GPT-4)

Emphasizes the importance of trusting in God's wisdom and acknowledging His love, even when faced with difficulties. Prays for God's support for all His creation and implores Him to guide them through His bounties and gifts, while overlooking their shortcomings and treating them with His grace and generosity. Concludes with a prayer invoking blessings upon the Manifestation of God and those who turn to Him with sincerity, asking for His infinite mercy and grace to be bestowed upon them. (GPT-4)

Trans: None. Abstract: Announces the divine message to Hasan, a believer in close proximity to Bahá'u'lláh. Reaffirms the call to recognize the divine Manifestation in different realms, and describes the resplendent lights from the direction of the Holy Land. Advises adherence to truth and justice, and assures protection for those who love Bahá'u'lláh. Provides imagery of spiritual flight, walking on water like land, and earthly challenges such as fleeing from calamity. Encourages taking a firm stance on divine matters and inviting others to the spiritual path with an uplifted voice. Offers blessings of spirit, glory, and honor to those who respond to the call to God and hold firm to His covenant. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Urges steadfastness in service to God and reflection on the condition of the oppressed prisoner (Bahá'u'lláh) caught between two factions. Emphasizes the importance of unity among people under one divine law, drawing attention to the weaknesses in the Islamic nation due to divisions and differences. Suggests that if someone were to walk the path of the greatest and the most sublime, it would be best and closest to righteousness. Mentions the innumerable explanations on this subject, but focuses on the mention of the recipient, acknowledging their eternal remembrance before God. Prays that God brings forth from the recipient what will revive the hearts of people, attract souls, and uplift spirits, and raise every dead and forsaken thing. Asserts that the glory of God is upon the recipient and those who have turned toward the Divine Threshold in the heavens and the earth. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Announces the revelation of divine verses and the advent of the Day of God. Mentions the exaltedness of the One who revealed the verses and engages the heavens and earth in preparations for His manifestation. Declares that all divine verses are a gift and a token of God's grace, and a leaf from His paradise. Laments the rejection of the one who sacrificed himself in God's path, while praising his faithfulness and devotion. Reminds the reader of the divine authority of Moses and Jesus, and urges them to recognize and heed the guidance found in the holy scriptures. Warns against turning away from God and breaking the covenant, and calls upon people to cast aside their attachment to this world and turn with pure hearts to the Lord of all worlds. Concludes by extolling the virtuous soul who renounces worldly concerns in love for God and expresses gratitude to God, the Sovereign of the mighty Day. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Laments the suffering of the Beloved at the hands of the enemies and the cruel treatment by humankind. Describes the Beloved as the cause of the revelation of sacred texts and the sending of messengers. Mentions the sacrifices made and the persecution endured for the sake of the Beloved. Addresses the loved one as "prisoner" and "oppressed," willing to sacrifice oneself for their sake. Affirms that despite the attempts of people to extinguish the Light, it continues to shine brightly, aided by the power of God. Acknowledges the inability of people to harm divine power and urges patience with their actions, for God is the All-Forgiving and All-Merciful. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Admonishes the people of religious factions, who are heedless even in the face of clear evidence. Recounts how they cursed and declared it permissible to spill each other's blood for 1,200 years over the matter of the Vicegerent and other similar issues. States that the same attitudes persist even among those who consider themselves part of the people of God's Cause. Depicts that, despite concealing themselves behind veils and curtains of divine names, the deniers have revealed themselves with the swords of hatred. Blesses those souls who can "pierce the veils of the names" and cling to the Day of God and what appeared therein. Mentions that the previous religious faction became attached to God's Cause every day, but simultaneously clung to the mention of false gods. Asserts that the blessed ones shall be glorified 'before and after', supported by a spirit from God, showing true knowledge of God's hidden reality. Urges the people to take hold of God's revealed Book 'with forces from His presence' and to support it with the 'troops of exposition'. Prays for assistance to remain steadfast in love for God and be protected from the doubts of those who deny His Revelation. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Mentions Ahmad, stating that God's remembrance illuminates the world and He desires to give Ahmad the water of life from the source of divine mercy. Refers to having previously sent a chalice of knowledge and another of divine wisdom, both consumed by Ahmad. Expresses the inability to count all the chalices and cups of divine understanding sent for Ahmad. Informs of having read his letter and sends a tablet from which divine knowledge flows, aiming to bring joy and consolation. Instructs Ahmad to gather his loved ones and read the revealed verses to them, so that they may soar on the wings of divine understanding in the atmosphere of their Lord's love. Encourages them not to be sad and rejoice in the grace that encompasses all horizons. Emphasizes that nothing shall be missed if they reflect upon the divine words, and they will experience bliss free from doubt or imperfections. Affirms the witnessing of this by all those who are knowledgeable and perceptive. Assures that they are under the canopy of divine favor and the tent of bounty. Designates Ahmad as a guiding star for humanity and instructs him to illuminate others with the light of God's countenance. Orders him to command people to act upon the Holy Laws revealed by God in the divine scriptures, emphasizing that these are a source of favor, spiritual sustenance, and everlasting life for them. Abstract: Exalts God and appreciates His blessings and manifestations. Describes the steadfastness of believers who are not held back by the strife of the world, the opposition of nations, the power of rulers, or the inhibition of scholars. Prays for God's protection and guidance for these believers, and for the revelation of divine bounties and mercies. Mentions the sorrow caused by the events and the concealed prophecy of divine gladness. Expresses hope for the support of all God's chosen ones, and for their freedom from malice and strife. Speaks of the ardent prayers for the believers in the exalted assemblies. Urges the people to seek reconciliation, and prays for God's guidance and grace for themselves and their loved ones. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Calls for attention to the divine command and to enjoin good upon others. Describes the imprisonment surrounded by the armies of heedlessness and error. Grants the addressee a distinguished name for inviting people to God. States that no one should oppose the addressee and that everyone should follow the teachings in the Tablets. Depicts the hearts of those who turn away from God's face as being in illusion and discord. Urges to proclaim God's cause and assures support in all conditions. Promises the elevation of God's cause and the manifestations of the divine Tablets. Extols those in God's presence, and encourages gathering people by the seashore of the supreme ocean to be mindful of God and not to follow every doubting idolater. Reflects on the transience of the world and the approach of death, stating that only those with love for God in their hearts will find refuge. Envisions the faces of the faithful illuminated at that time, with angels of paradise carrying flasks and cups of life-giving wine for them. Exhorts focusing on the remembrance of God and not being saddened by the opposition of the wicked. Foretells the consequences of disbelief and the divine punishment on them while bestowing glory upon the addressee and those who turn to God. (GPT-4)

BRL_FIRE_BH#10x. ... The people of the world have grievously erred, for they fondly imagine that they can exterminate the Cause of God, that they would be able to extinguish His effulgent light... Abstract: Declares a new divine era has begun and describes the departure of the "Husayn of eternity" with a small group from the land of "Ba." Asserts the impossibility of extinguishing the divine light or silencing the holy lamps, despite efforts to do so. Stresses the supremacy of God's will and refers to the creation and extinction of all things through a single breath or word from God. Mentions the weeping of the friends of God and the laughter of their enemies, with the former winning divine mercy and the latter incurring divine wrath. Expresses determination to remain steadfast in the face of rejection and exile. Foretells the eventual fading of material life and the eternal triumph of the people of God. Expresses hope for the recipient's enlightenment through drinking from the "fount of grace" and recognizing the splendors of the divine presence. Wishes the recipient joy and contentment. Mentions sending Násir on a mission of service and instructing him not to neglect his duties. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Acknowledges the plight of the scattered believers in the land of Sad, who have chosen exile due to the oppression of the tyrants. Mentions the divine grace that surrounds them, known to the inhabitants of the highest paradise. Compares their names to stars in the heavens, their mention to the flowing waters of the river of mercy. Urges them to be vigilant in safeguarding their exalted positions, to seek God's assistance, and to avoid being consumed by earthly distractions. Expresses hope that the believers will attain steadfastness in faith, and promulgates their continuous divine blessings. Addresses Husayn, who received a special tablet and seeks to grasp its meaning, urging steadfastness and victory. Reveals the tablet is a response but focuses on blessings for the believers in the land of Sad, who hold the most sacred and protected parts of the tablet. Concludes with blessings upon the friends and loved ones of God, and curses upon the enemies who have committed atrocities witnessed by the supreme Pen and the celestial Tree. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Directs attention to the words emanating from the divine tablet, likening them to the sun shining on the horizon of the divine Will. Encourages individuals to display qualities that delight the world, and asserts that the essence of religion is counsel and wisdom. Foretells the eventual dispersion of "the darkness of oppression" by the "Sun of Justice" and affirms the inability of humanity to extinguish the divine light. Cautions against the scholars of different ages who obstruct people's access to higher knowledge and consider themselves knowledgeable while being ignorant in the eyes of God. Acknowledges the divisions caused by some people who wrongly judge others but asserts the need for unity and focusing on the divine Will. Urges prayer for divine assistance and being thankful for the great favor conferred by God. Highlights the importance of recognizing and accepting divine blessings. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Addresses Ahmad, speaking of the waves of the "Sea of His utterance" and the heights of the "heaven of His wisdom." Instructs Ahmad to rise in the name of his Lord and remind people of the Day that "there is none other God but Him, the Mighty, the Best-Beloved." Proclaims the Day of Remembrance and of explanation, and opens the tongue to mention the appearance of the Greatest Name. Calls the attention of the realm of existence to Bahá'u'lláh as the Source of joy and guidance. Wishes Ahmad to become a source of life through God's assistance. Instructs Ahmad to invite people with wisdom and eloquence to the path of God, and to distribute the life-giving waters that flow from the Pen of the Most Gracious. States that each atom of existence is proclaiming the Promised Day. Warns to be vigilant and act wisely to avoid harm to others. Tells Ahmad to greet the friends of God and remind them of the Day of His appearance. Describes the world as transient, with only those souls who cling to the cord of God's love and hold on to the branches of His grace being successful, near, and sincere. (GPT-4)

Recalls witnessing the oppression of the people of God and advises adherence to the revealed verses. Declares the eternal nature of divine revelations and promises divine assistance. Calls for revival through the breezes of God's mercy and warns against causing corruption. Rejects premature claims of divine authority and condemns disbelief in the Great God. Addresses the spiritual heedlessness and yearning love for God in those who truly know Him. Announces the appearance of divine messengers and requests protection from the fire of hell. Urges detachment from the world and avoidance of those bearing the marks of damnation. Exhorts to the remembrance of God among the peoples, overcoming fear of oppressors, and resisting the widespread seductive forces. Encourages giving breath to divine melodies and divine judgment. Comforts greatly in the face of adversities and calls for steadfast support. Concludes with praises to God, the Lord of all worlds. (GPT-4)

Trans: LOIR16.223, BLC_PT#042. O Cup-Bearer, give me a drop of the mystic Flame, that it may wash my soul from the whispers of the flesh... Notes: LL#284. Abstract: A mystic poem invoking the spiritual waters to cleanse the soul from worldly desires. Describes transformative images such as "the fire that reveals the spiritual Kawthar" and the love that ignites the "realm of water and clay" and dwells in the heart of humanity. Portrays overwhelming feelings of devotion, love's duality as both "an intimate companion" and "the very countenance of Divinity," and its power to intoxicate and elevate the spiritual seeker. Recognizes the force of love as capable of binding hearts, creating unity or scattering souls, and offering sacrifices. Employs rich imagery of spiritual awakening in the mention of biblical and Qur'anic figures such as Moses, Joseph, and the Messiah. Urges the Dervish not to further unveil the mysteries shrouded in divine wisdom, as the poem concludes with a recognition of human limitations in understanding the true essence and workings of love. Exchange thy sorrow for happiness and drink thy sadness from the cup of joy. Shouldst thou desire to enter the path of search, thou must needs be patient...

Abstract: A poetic Tablet describing the sorrow of separation and the joy of reunion with the Divine Beloved. Calls for the purifying of the heart and the soul, and finding solace in the trials and tribulations of love. Encourages the faithful to submit to the will of God, drink from the wine of contentment, and enter the spiritual realms where they will witness the unseen, hear the inaudible, and join in the celestial dance. Emphasizes the cleansing of the eye and the heart from sorrow and grief while praising the Almighty with sweet melodies. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Emphasizes the importance of spiritual growth, as divine trees adorned with heavenly fruits bloom while our bodies remain imprisoned in dust. Acknowledges that countless heavenly gardens will appear, yet our limited physical senses cannot truly behold them. Urges to cherish these fleeting days by remembering God and seeking His refuge in all situations, remaining mindful of not falling into the clutches of demonic whispers. Advises striving to manifest good moral conduct and praiseworthy actions so as not to emit an odour of worldliness and attachment, hoping that such behaviour may revive the hearts of the spiritually dead and grant eternal life to those who associate with you. Though the advice of the wise yields no fruit for the ignorant, the Tablet advises to avoid exposing oneself to spiritual harm, reiterating previous exhortations to refrain from carnal desires, argumentation and contention with others. Laments that despite these prohibitions, individuals have engaged in forbidden acts, attributing their deeds to Bahá'u'lláh and cloaking themselves in the guise of piety. Reminds that past scriptures warn of wolves appearing in sheep's clothing, deceiving and preoccupying people. Encourages remaining vigilant for the sake of truth, valuing the remembrance of God, protecting entrusted spiritual treasures, and constantly expressing gratitude for the spiritual journey and proximity to God achieved in these veiled days. Concludes with a prayer for the recipient. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Exhorts Abd al-Nazir to arise and warn those veiled from the truth. Proclaims the Day of God's mercy and the arrival of divine proof. Instructs to hold firmly to the cord that connects earth and heaven. Warns against following those in disbelief and those far from God's presence who have broken their covenant and taken Satan as a helper. States that the sun of divine favor has risen from the horizon of justice, illuminating the worlds. Affirms that those who cast aside God's command are deprived of everlasting grace and will find themselves in the abyss of subjection, without a helper. Encourages a believer imprisoned by the forces of unbelief to rejoice in the remembrance of God, take refuge in His grace and be severed from all else. Reminds the reader that everything seen shall pass away, and only the kingdom of the one true God shall remain. Concludes by exalting those who believe and assures them of their lofty destiny recorded in a hidden tablet. (GPT-4)

Notes: LL#444. Abstract:* Admonishes believers to worship only God and not spread corruption on earth. Some achieve guidance, others follow their own desires. Expresses that the sorrow is not from imprisonment or humiliation, but from those who commit indecency and falsely attribute themselves to God. Calls on Baha'is to detach from worldly concerns, to become a source of sanctity for the inhabitants of paradise, and to manifest God's signs. Warns of those who squander divine guidance by following their own desires, and urges prayers for their guidance. Describes the indifference to worldly treasures among the devoted, who opt for God's greater vision. Urges drinking from the cup of detachment in the name of God and focusing on His will, as worldly possessions fade and change. Reminds not to forget God's bounty, who has called to Himself and rescued from the depths of illusion. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Advises all in the Great Prison to embrace virtues, righteous deeds, and humanitarian qualities as they elevate God's Word and promote His Cause. Urges everyone to hold fast to what is good and refrain from evil, being mindful that many have claimed faith but their actions tarnished sacred entities. Instructs that the world has become engulfed in darkness and the meanings and actions have become veiled, while words and speeches have multiplied. Affirms that today is the day of action, and any small action of good will be rewarded in this world and the next. Encourages striving to perform deeds purely for God's sake and to embrace unity and harmony, as it is beloved by the Almighty. Calls for people to follow the commands of God and not be among the divided. Blesses those who patiently persevere in seeking God's pleasure and assures that they will be remembered by the Most High. Invokes divine glory upon all who hold fast to the cord of unity in the days of the Lord of the Universe. (GPT-4)

Describes humanity as imagining that they have been called to God's highest horizons to exalt His Cause rather than receiving guidance to vivify their hearts and souls. Asks God to unveil the sight of His creation, so that they may see the Manifestation of His Self and be drawn purely toward His divine unity. Encourages the submissiveness to tribulations before God, recognizing that those who love and know God do not care for themselves except in furthering His Cause. Requests that God reveal to His servants His intended purpose for them and help them draw closer to the life-giving waters and turn towards His merciful Name. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Acknowledges receipt of the letter and prays for the writer's spiritual progress. Refers to the divine knowledge that can never perish, unlike worldly possessions that eventually fade away. Prays for the attainment of a station where one's mention will shine like a star in the celestial realm of divine attributes. Offers a prayer for deliverance from imprisonment and for the bestowal of children who will glorify God on earth. Concludes with a plea not to be left without an heir, affirming that God is the best of inheritors. (GPT-4)

Abstract: A mystic tablet, which describes the spiritual journey of a seeker who attains the presence of the Beloved. Encourages the seeker to transcend the limitations of earthly attachments and enter the eternal garden, where the divine mysteries can be discovered. Invites the reader to distinguish between the song of the Divine Nightingale and the cries of earthly crows, emphasizing the importance of spiritual discernment. Highlights the ineffable nature of the divine unity, beyond the reach of human description or understanding. Warns against the pitfalls of clinging to false notions or limited understandings, which prevent the soul from experiencing the true divine presence. Ultimately, the poem calls the seeker to detach their heart from all save the Beloved, and immerse themselves in the ocean of Divine knowledge and love. (GPT-4)

Pubs: BRL_DA#055. Trans: None. Abstract: Acknowledges those who believe in God during these days as having attained the pinnacle of grace from the All-Knowing. Declares that those who disbelieve in God and the Manifestation of His Self will be denounced by every atom of creation. Calls upon the people to prepare for the Day when God shall come "upon the clouds of light." Affirms that faith, to be effective, entails entering under the divine shadow. Cautions against associating others with God or deviating from His path. Mentions that the similitude of divine verses is like the spirit which gives life to the believers. Contrasts the condition of those who receive the verses with those who deprive themselves, who are spiritually dead and forgotten. Differentiates between the fortunate and the wretched, light and darkness. Encourages steadfastness in following the divine commands. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Addresses the trials faced by the Divine realms at all times as signs for all beings. Describes how the self, in its essence and spirit, is sacrificed for God's bounty, mercy, and all-encompassing grace, which extends across all horizons. Depicts the darkness that engulfs those who deny God, His signs, and His sovereignty. Emphasizes that nothing can deter God from doing as He pleases. Calls all to turn to God, the Master of all creation. Mentions those who deny God and become arrogant with their titles, giving examples of false claims made by such individuals. Asserts the ultimate triumph of the divine spring breezes and the opening of heaven's gates, and the victory of those who recognize and detach from all directions in God's days. Urges the individual to enlighten their heart with the lamp of the Almighty lit by the Ancient Sovereign and to steadfastly follow God's command with His chosen authority. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Addresses a fellow wronged individual who has tasted the cup of tribulation and endured suffering. Encourages them not to grieve, as God's bounty encompasses them and will bring relief. Reminds them that they are under constant divine protection, and should not be troubled by arising events. Urges them to find solace in God's mercy and bounties, and experience peace, joy, and assurance on the "couch of tranquility". Recounts a prayer, seeking God's assistance, generosity, and removal of sorrows. Asks to be made among those unhindered by anything on their spiritual journey towards God. Appealing to God's powers and attributes, requests the ability to serve and extol His praises, and seek rectification of personal affairs, fulfillment of needs, and acknowledgement of God's omnipotence and authority. Musical interps: C. McLoughlin (after J. Lincoln). Abstract:* Urges the yearning hearts to bear patiently the fires of separation and the difficulties they face in their path. Describes the intensity of their longing, as if their hearts would be consumed by the flames of love, and their souls touched by the heat of nearness. Affirms the power and protection of God over the weak and fearful. Seeks assistance from God to grant them strength and to raise the banners of divine victory. Prays for protection and guidance in the face of adversity and enemies, and for the ultimate salvation of the faithful servants who believe and strive in God's path. (GPT-4)

Trans: GWB#020x. ...Know thou of a certainty that the Unseen can in no wise incarnate His Essence and reveal it unto men. He is, and hath ever been, immensely exalted... Notes: LL#359. Abstract: Mentions one who soared with the remembrance of the Almighty, describing that in this atmosphere the birds of paradise fly, and the fragrance of the divine shirt emanates. Asserts that His appearance is not one of a temple or form, but the manifestation of God amongst His servants. Declares that the unseen has no temple or form for manifestation, but it is eternally sanctified, voicing in the Godly perspective "I am God, no deity but I, the All-Knowing, the Wise." States that the unseen is recognized through the manifestation, and the manifestation in itself is the supreme evidence amongst nations. Revives the spiritually dead with the emanations of His verses and divine signs, causing even stones to speak His praise, though the majority of people remain silent. Calls upon the Master of servants to remember and respond to this wondrous, solemn call, which has descended from on high. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Declares the appearance of God's Self and the utterance of divine verses that attract souls. Describes the Day when souls are agitated, mountains pass away, and all are struck except those chosen by God. Blesses the one who turns to the Qiblah of the horizons and takes hold of God's Tablet. Witnesses that those who deny the origin of the divine cause have no share in the divine book. Urges contemplation to understand God's purpose and to not turn to the ignorant. Affirms the exclusivity of God's Essence and Unity, and calls on the people to follow. Advises holding fast to the Cord of the divine command and clinging to the hem of God's mercy. Blesses those who succeed and turn to God with their hearts, casting away the vain imaginings and uttering the divine remembrance which God has made the authority over all remembrances. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Emphasizes the greatness and significance of this day, often mentioned in previous divine scriptures. Discusses humanity's spiritual deprivation due to their intoxication with worldly desires and suggests that the people of God should share divine teachings according to the capacity of each individual. Expresses gratitude for Javad's protection from the great terror and his attainment of the great vision, even when most people are deprived of the recognition of the Eternal Sovereign due to the influence of the scholars of their time. Counsels Javad to cherish and safeguard the tablet revealed for him, and to convey praises and remembrance to the friends in his land. Prayers for the protection and divine assistance for Javad and his companions. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Advises Husayn to arise in service to the Cause of God and the promotion of unity, drawing upon divine love and the flame of compassion. Illustrates the transformative power of turning to God through the story of Jesus, who raised a fisherman to the station of a guide by inviting him to overcome his own desires and limitations. Encourages steadfastness in the face of opposition and the pursuit of firmness and service to God, as today is the Day of Steadfastness. Abstract: Expresses sorrow for the trials faced by Mulla Ali Akbar. Invokes the might of the divine power that magnifies God's cause despite the oppressors' desires to extinguish it. Counsels service to the cause with steadfastness that dispels doubts and fears. Assures that God's light cannot be withheld due to the oppressors' wrongdoing. Reminds that the divine plan's progress cannot be hindered. Encourages the friends in that land to send their praises on behalf of the oppressed. Foretells the imminent manifestation of rewards for the pure-hearted and the chosen ones who observe their names in God's Book. Sends blessings to those who turn towards the Supreme Horizon on this momentous day. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Admonishes the loved ones of God to endure the tribulations faced for His sake. Testifies to the oppression of the faithful by those who exchanged the favor of God for disbelief, dooming their own people. Warns against being deterred by the injustice of enemies or the authority of the 'ulama, those past and present. Describes the 'ulama as the source of hatred, tyranny, and hypocrisy, lamenting the grief this causes to the eyes of the celestial concourse and the Most Exalted Paradise. Calls upon a youth to accept the message from the Most Glorious Lord and recounts the tribulations encountered due to the influence of Satan. Encourages the believers to fear God and not to reject the one who brings the proofs of the Prophets. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Exhorts steadfastness in the Cause of God, praises the Beloved of the world who was victorious through God's love, and mentions many men who have been deprived of the remembrance and recognition of God. Describes some women who gaze toward the highest heaven and are adorned with the garment of love for the Beloved of the world. Assures that no performed deeds shall be wasted in God's presence, and congratulates the reader for being among those who have love for God. Expresses hope that the reader shall remain under the shadow of God's grace. Urges detachment from the worldly life and to focus on the love of God, which will bring joy in all realms. Blesses the reader's son who believed in God, and calls on him to be upright, undisturbed by the doubts of disbelievers, standing firm with the people of certainty. (GPT-4)

Describes how some rejected and expelled Him, confining Him in a prison, but He still calls people to God. Beseches God to help His servants recognize His manifestation and enter the shadow of His great mercy. Questions how long mankind will remain in heedlessness and distance from God, and pleads with Him to draw them nearer. Prays for the removal of veils so they may behold the horizon of Divine Oneness and the dawning place of God's lordship. Asserts that if they taste the sweetness of God's remembrance, they would abandon their possessions and hasten toward Him. Finally implores God to attract their hearts with His remembrance, make them independent through His riches, and assist them in spreading His cause. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Addresses humanity by announcing the advent of the Messenger of God, and reaffirms the role of the Messenger in guiding people towards God's lofty station. Warns against calling the divine messenger a liar and urges justice in understanding the purpose of divine revelation. Compares the divine revelation to the sun, illuminating the world and enlightening the people. Highlights the importance of spiritual education and transformation in uplifting human souls, emphasizing the need to seek God's assistance in purifying one's soul. Promises divine assistance to those who follow the guidance of God and at the same time warns about the consequences of turning away from it. Mentions the importance of steadfastness, spiritual insight, and recognizing the truth in oneself. Proclaims the ultimate outcome of the world as it perishes, leaving only what has been preordained for those who have turned to God in faith. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Calls upon the one mentioned in the presence of the Prisoner to listen to the call of the hidden Name, Who appeared with truth and proclaims the highest call in the realm of creation. Urges focusing on what has been revealed by the Everlasting, instead of the signs and allusions offered by others. Affirms that the verses descend in different manners, sometimes beyond human comprehension and sometimes following established principles, depending on God's will. Invokes particular principles of knowledge which only the chosen possess. Encourages seeking understanding from those who have attained God's presence. Exhorts to abandon false knowledge and strive in service to God. Warns against letting worldly attachments or the sayings of others hinder the seeker's progress, and advises recognizing the value of these days and seeking God's favor. Urges allowing the true character to shine through and to focus on the remembrance of God, and to no be saddened by the creations and their clamor. (GPT-4)

I testify unto Thy oneness and Thy singleness, that in Thy sovereignty Thou art peerless and in Thy dominion without likeness... Abstract: Announces prophethood's culmination in the advent of the divine Báb, who invited humanity to the unity of God. Laments that people rejected divine messengers, with various accusations of madness, sourcery and falsehood. Describes how Iran's scholars initially sought the truth, yet later opposed the Báb and sought His blood. Features a prayer seeking refuge in God's oneness and protection from enemies, asking to be drawn nearer to God and to receive the same favor granted to His chosen ones. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Announces the celestial event foretold by the messengers of God, fulfilled through Bahá'u'lláh's revelation. Praises both the recipient's recognition of this divine manifestation, and their adornment in the "raiment of Divine love." Reflects on the fate of those who rejected Bahá'u'lláh's message and failed their test. Urges protection of this exalted position from the "glances of the envious," and bestows blessings "from the horizon of the Heavenly Realm" upon the recipient and all who recognize these divine lights. Trans: COC#1785. Fear ye God, O people of the earth, and think not that the wine We have mentioned in Our Tablet is the wine which men drink... Abstract: Praises one who believed in God and was mentioned in the presence of the wronged one. Draws parallels between the time of the Prophet Muhammad and the rejection of the Prophet by the people. Extols the revelation of verses that cannot be resisted by the armies of the first and the last. Counsels against distress caused by the deniers of the Day of Judgment. Describes the transformative power of divine love, which can lead a person to the presence of God and extinguish egotistical desires. References the spiritual River whose drink cleanses the hearts of the lovers of God, strengthens the signs of divine unity and abstraction, and admits them into the sanctuary of the Beloved. Advises against confusing the spiritual drink with a drink of self, as it can intoxicate the mind and turn one's face away from God. (GPT-4)

Describes the diverse manifestations of this Light in various mirrors, including wisdom in the hearts of the wise, wondrous arts in the hearts of the skilled, and the mysteries of knowledge and realities of explanation in the hearts of the mystics. Affirms that all beings come into existence from, and are sustained by, the Sun of the Divine Word and its attributes. Depicts the Divine Fire as consuming hearts of the lovers, while this fire is in truth, the water of life, bringing both nourishment and illumination. Expresses the desire to partake of the pure life-giving spiritual water, transcending the world and its people in the pathway of love for God. Concludes by invoking blessing and glory upon the people of Bahá. (GPT-4)

Encourages to not be disheartened and to remain steadfast in faith. Reveals that the divine realities and spiritual bounties are everlasting and concealed, only to be manifested in the world of creation and in the afterlife. Reminds that the light of the sun is not lost, even when obscured by clouds, and thus not to be saddened by unworthy remarks. Affirms that the acceptance of truth is not contingent upon conditions, and expresses gratitude for God's immense grace, addressing Him as "the Beloved of the worlds." (GPT-4)

Abstract: Instructs Mírzá Abu'l-Fadl Golpáyigání to share the divine revelations, including the Books of Sijjin and the Tablets of Fire, which were mentioned in previous divine scriptures. Encourages him to support those on the path of the Cause and to remove veils of delusion, so that they might turn their attention towards the true signs of God. Conveys greetings and blessings to all believers present with him. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Proclaims the presence of the Divine nearness and exalts the celestial melody of praising God. Describes the spiritual garden, where "each atom of the dust therein sings divine praises". Celebrates the souls that "attained the shores of the divine ocean" and were blessed. Suggests seeking beauty in God's creation and listening to His call. Advises to trust in the Almighty to protect and guide towards the true path. (GPT-4)
