Abstract: Emphasizes the importance of loyalty in response to a letter. Commends the reader for their devoted efforts and forwarding of a tablet. Encourages the publication and distribution of a treatise and assures that it will become more pleasing and sweet. Advises not to interfere in political matters, to exercise restraint, maintain serenity and dignity, and engage in harmonious relations with all groups. Reminds readers to act according to divine teachings and not to rely on personal opinions. Acknowledges that difficulties will pass and the wisdom behind these events will become clear. Expresses the goal of unity, elevating knowledge and the unity of humanity, fostering peace and cooperation, and promoting the virtues and qualities of a spiritual life. Urges readers not to engage in political affairs and to focus on moral development. Assures that any mentions of difficulties in the writings are for the purpose of admonition and awakening, rather than complaint. Expresses that the true intention is the well-being of all and wishes the blessings of the Abhá Kingdom upon them. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Reports receipt of a tablet, but not of an earlier one. Mentions a letter from the son of a preacher who insulted the Covenant and spread calumnies; advises friends to be aware of his enmity. Denies authorship of letters attributed to Abdu'l-Baha and received by Atabak; warns against possible forgeries by Covenant-breakers. Requests a copy of such a letter. Encourages informing the two believers about the existing corruption. Indicates that if documents containing discrepancies are found, it should be questioned where they came from. Recommends that Shu'kat should explain to an ambassador the true situation, adherence to the governments, goodwill towards kings, loyalty to the throne, divine verses pertaining to this theme, prayers offered by Bahá'u'lláh for Sultan Abdul Hamid Khan, and what has been written by 'Abdu'l-Bahá about the Ottoman and Iranian governments. Mentions that the divine vision has brought spiritual guidance to several individuals. Urges believers to spread the teachings of the Bahá'í Faith eloquently and effectively. Expresses hope for Iran's future stability and prosperity, while urging Bahá'ís to remain detached from political strife. Interprets a dream as a sign of the increasing influence of the Word of God in Iran and beyond. Confirms a recent communication with a named individual. (GPT-4)

Perplexing difficulties have arisen and formidable obstacles have appeared... Abstract:* Recounts the receipt and examination of a detailed letter. Expresses happiness for the comfort of Haji Lutf'ali, the espousal of the daughters of the late Aqa Shaykh Javad and Aqa Abdul-Husayn Haji, and the care shown for Khwaja Baha'u'th. Encourages continued considerate treatment of all sects and nations. Discusses the suitability of Alexandria as a travel destination and mentions the potential outcomes. Addresses the character of Mirza Mehdi Hakim, advising to respond gently if one happens to encounter him. Praises the persuasive response given to Mirza Husayn and urges further prayer and supplication for his healing. Emphasizes that even if "the Tree of Goodness is uprooted," no one would hasten to a fruitless tree, and if "the ocean of sweet water" were to disappear, no one would drink from a pool of bitter water. Also, if the melody of the Nightingale of Meaning is cut off from the garden of God, nobody would be attracted to the crowing of crows. Affirms the difficulty of securing a place in Alexandria due to the abundance of debts and bills. Expresses hope that the difficulties will be resolved and comfort attained through the grace and assistance of God. Advises avoidance of dangerous endeavors and beseeches God's guidance, power, and wisdom in overcoming obstacles, untethering difficult knots, and simplifying complex matters. (GPT-4)

Abstract: Urges unity and cooperation in the election of parliament members, citing successful elections in America and Europe as examples. Laments the discord among religious sects in Iran and predicts the futility of the current parliament as a result. Refutes false allegations of sending money to bribe Iranian officials for Bahá'ís to gain parliamentary membership. Describes his own detachment and humility, seeking the spiritual growth of the friends rather than worldly positions. Expresses his desire for souls to dance in the arena of divine love, using the imagery of "one hand holding the cup of wine and the other the beloved's curl." Assures that the false allegations will have no lasting impact, and reports sending a clear message to one of the friends in Iran not to seek parliamentary membership. Shares his sleepless nights due to the news of disunity from Iran and his own physical exhaustion while writing the letter. Grants permission for the recipient's wife to visit the Holy Land if possible. (GPT-4)

O noble Lady! It was our hope that during this winter thou wilt make a trip to Haifa in order to spend thy days for some time... ...The emancipation of women is a principle of the principles of the religion of God; for this reason I summoned the blessed leaf, Rouha, to Paris... Abstract: Expresses hope for the reader's future journey to Haifa and the Holy Land. Prays for spiritual nobility and closeness to God for the reader and her daughters. Mentions the increasing progress towards women's freedom, but stresses the importance of moderation in advocating for women's rights. Cautions against those who deviate from the divine path and sow doubts like Judas Iscariot. Encourages steadfastness in the reader and the protection of the divine teachings. Hopes for the reader's daughters to render great services to the cause and contribute to the freedom of women, which is part of God's ordinances. Advises the reader's daughters to speak with gentle and measured words when promoting the divine teachings, including women's freedom and equality. (GPT-4)*

Acknowledges past efforts of philosophers, but emphasizes that unity can only be realized through divine teachings and assistance, and the application of Bahá'u'lláh's teachings. Hopes for Dr. Zamenhof to be successful in his efforts to develop Esperanto further, with divine support. Advises turning to the divine Kingdom for answers to all questions, as Bahá'u'lláh's teachings unlock hidden mysteries and provide clarity. Conveys fond remembrance and prayers for Martha Root. Trans: MAX.312ax. O thou beloved Maid Servant of God! A detailed tablet is written to you. Praise be to God that in San Francisco you are confirmed in the service... Abstract: Praises Mrs. Ella Goodall Cooper's services in San Francisco and expresses hope for divine confirmations. Clarifies an issue about the soul lingering around the body for forty days after death, stating it is not mentioned in divine words. Explains that preventing procreation is impermissible; if possible one must raise children and provide for their education. Encourages preparation for a 1915 exposition in America, so that Bahá'ís may attend. Stresses the importance of supporting the Mashriq'u-Adhkár. Offers prayers for various individuals, expressing hope for their spiritual advancement and efforts to promote unity. Acknowledges an invitation by Mrs. Cooper and expresses spiritual delight from reading it. Hopes for her success in serving the Faith in Berkeley. Advises against including a pamphlet of quotations from the Writings in a list of literature. (GPT-4)

In all the prophetic Dispensations, philanthropic affairs were confined to their respective peoples only... Abstract:* Highlights the importance of public holidays for fostering unity and joy among nations. Describes the significance of Nowruz for Iranians, as a time of renewal, rejuvenation, and the beginning of spring, as well as for historical events that brought honor and prosperity to Iran. Encourages peoples to celebrate these special days by focusing on collective well-being, conducting acts of charity, and promoting education, morality, trade, or other beneficial activities. Emphasizes the importance of spiritual unity, joy, and service to humanity in the Bahá'í Faith, especially during auspicious days. Urges Bahá'ís to engage in actions that benefit all humanity, rather than just their own community, considering that the Bahá'í Faith seeks the welfare of all people. States that in past religious eras, acts of charity were often focused on specific communities, whereas in this new age of the Bahá'í Faith, all good deeds should be inclusive of all humanity, without exception. Expresses hope that Bahá'ís will become sources of divine mercy for everyone. (GPT-4)
